Highlights

- The monthly return of the fund was 0.3% (YTD: -%).
- The fund's negative performance was primarily driven by unrealised foreign-exchange (in particular the Bolivian boliviano) and valuation losses in both the equity and loan portfolios. Positive contributions from stable interest income, dividend income and realised equity gains (the fund sold a part of its equity stake in an investee in Uganda) only partly offset these adverse movements. FX hedging contracts had a limited positive effect by being more long term in nature.
- In July the fund received EUR EUR 5.5M in principal repayments and EUR 5.3M in equity sales. Over the same period, the fund disbursed EUR 6.2M.
- Reopening the Strait of Hormuz now appears more difficult than it did at the start of the conflict. Still, neither the US nor Iran is likely to admit that peace efforts are faltering, making continued muddling through, punctuated by occasional strikes, the most likely scenario. Despite the global uncertainty, emerging markets continued to weather well. GDP growth is slowing in the Middle East and Asia, but manageable oil price levels and some dollar strength has tempered the economic impact on emerging markets. On the domestic front, credible exchange-rate adjustments, tighter monetary policy and strong local demand in emerging markets have helped balance the risks. We expect relative strong fiscal positions and high real policy rates compared to the advanced economy counterparts will continue boosting their relative resilience the rest of the year.
